Call to Worship (From Psalm 100)

One: Shout joyfully to the Lord, all the earth.

ALL: Serve the Lord with gladness, come before God with joyful singing.

One: Know that it is God who made us,

ALL: Enter God's gates with thanksgiving, and this sacred place with thanksgiving.

One: For God is good!

ALL: God's loving kindness is everlasting to all generations.

* Hymn #106 Alleluia! Alleluia! Give Thanks

Call to Confession:

If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is less within us. If we confess our sins, our departures from God's paths, God who is always faithful and just will hear our petitions and heal us in the ways of God's grace and loving embrace. Let us together pray in humility and gratitude the unison prayer of confession.

Prayer of Confession (unison)

God of Wonder, Joy, Love, and Grace, we humbly come before you to confess our sins and shortcomings. Sometimes we are so discouraged, stymied by criticism, lost in focusing on the negative and what is missing - that we forget the great gifts we have been given. Forgive us, please, for our short memories; renew our spirit so that we may be bold in our faith, knowing that your grace is sufficient to empower this congregation to carry out your ministry and mission. We ask these things and more in the name of Our Lord, Jesus Christ, Amen.

Silent Confession

About the Author

Tilly Grey was born in Sneden's Landing New York in 1938, the daughter of Broadway actress Sally Bates and documentary film director Pare Lorentz. She attended Palisades Elementary School through the 8th grade, spent her teen years in Rome, Italy and returned to America to go to college in 1956.

However, Grey's childhood dream was to be a reporter so she dropped out of college in her second year and went to work as a general assignment reporter for The Durango Herald News, a small daily paper in Colorado. She later worked for newspapers in Pennsylvania and California.

Grey moved back to Rockland County with her two children after she was divorced in 1964. She received her degree from Columbia School of General Studies and later earned a Masters degree at Long Island University.

Grey became director of Skunk Hollow High School, a private alternative high school in Pomona, in 1970. "Although I had no experience running a school, no one else wanted the job, so I thought I'd try it." Grey says. She moved from Skunk Hollow to East Ramapo's School Within A School program four years later. Grey says she made the decision to leave teaching and find a new career on her 50th birthday. "I was sitting in my condo eating a frozen dinner when I heard a voice in my head ask, "Is this what you want to be doing when you are 60? I don't think so." A year later she quit her job and volunteered at Habitat for Humanity International's headquarters in Americus, Georgia, a move that mushroomed into a totally new job and lifestyle.

Grey's book, "On The Path With Heart: In Africa with Habitat for Humanity International" is the story of what happens when she signs on to become a Habitat international partner (an underpaid staff member or overpaid volunteer) at the age of 58 and goes to Africa for six months to report on the low-cost housing mission's work there. Five years later, she is still on the job as Habitat Africa/Middle East correspondent.

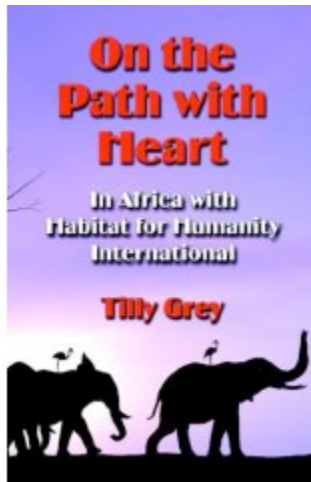

To her surprise, Grey discovers in Africa that so-called missionaries can be a lot of fun. "They work very hard and play hard as well." She also discovers they are very tolerant of her life style which includes playing blackjack and gambling on the horses. Their stories are chronicled from Botswana where the Great Synchronized Swimming Competition takes place, to Tanzania where the Habitat staff pulls off a major build with the President of Tanzania.

Africans running Habitat programs in their communities in Uganda, Zimbabwe, and Kenya teach Grey about their culture, she finds a lot in common with a South African widow during the night she spends inside a former black township and in Kenya she learns that it's malaria that kills most Africans and elephants that African women fear most. "What did I fear most in Africa? Anything on four wheels."

Grey finds stories everywhere; among leprosy survivors in Uganda who are becoming part of a community for the first time in years, with orphan head of households in Burundi who are beginning life over after a brutal civil war, and on the road in Botswana when the truck breaks down. Then there is the one about the mother-in-law who climbs into bed with her one night in Uganda.

"This is a book about people. Not just the people I met in Africa, but about myself as well. The title "On the Path with Heart" is a quote from Carlos Castenada. I used it because working in Africa for Habitat gave me a chance to use all the reporting and teaching skills I had accumulated in my life and do it to help a terrific organization. One day I was climbing up a steep path in Uganda to interview new homeowners and I heard myself humming under my breath. I stopped walking for a moment to savor the thought - I am happy."

Grey's job with Habitat came to an end in 2002. She now lives in Florida and still volunteers with Habitat, serving on the Women Build Council. "But," she says, "My son Norman lives in New City so I still think of Rockland County as "home."
